You'll be the belle of the ball

February 27th, 2007

Well, maybe not the ball, but you will be the belle of the next playgroup or family outing if you're sporting the new Belle Baby Carrier.

The first thing that struck me about the Belle Baby Carrier was not only the stylish and fun patterns (Cheetah, anyone?) but rather how soft and comfortable it looked. This baby carrier is not bulky and is so much easier to fold up and transport than other baby carriers I've tried. But don't let the soft look and feel of the Belle Baby Carrier fool you. This carrier is made here in the U.S. and uses the same hardware and webbing that you'll find on high-end backpacks. The fabrics, though soft and luxurious, are strong and easy to wash. But that's not the best part.

What I really love about this carrier is the unique waist belt, which transfers baby's weight to your hips and away from your back. When I used one of the other, more popular baby carriers, it held baby well but I won't say it was comfortable for long periods of time. Even when wearing it correctly I could feel the weight in my upper back. With the Belle Baby Carrier, your baby is nestled directly against you in a restful, stable, and natural hip position. And natural is what we should be all about.

But don't take my word for it. The reviews are in and the Belle Baby Carrier is quickly becoming a must-have for moms and dads alike. I'm not the only one finding it "without a doubt, the most comfortable and versatile of all baby carriers on the market today."
